Paris, September 1st, 2025 – Sopra Steria, a major player in the European tech sector, has been appointed as one of Posten Bring's strategic IT partners. Thanks to this collaboration, the employees of Posten Bring, the leading logistics group in the Nordics, will benefit from a simpler and more efficient workday, powered by Sopra Steria's next-generation IT platforms.

Posten Bring ensures safe and efficient delivery of mail, parcels and freight to individuals, businesses, and public organisations across the Nordic region – every single day.

Following a comprehensive international tender process, Posten Bring has selected Sopra Steria as its strategic provider of solutions for digital workplace, private cloud and identity and access management. Sopra Steria will also support the group in both ongoing and future digitalisation and innovation initiatives.

Ambitious collaboration

The public tender was won in competition with several strong global players. The agreement between Posten Bring and Sopra Steria runs for four years, with an option for an additional three.

Arne Erik Berntzen, CTO at Posten Bring, commented: "We have already built a solid foundation for innovation and technological development, and we aim to strengthen this even further. To achieve our ambitions, we need strong and forward-thinking partners. Sopra Steria will be a key strategic partner in a shared Nordic delivery"

Solutions for the future

Sopra Steria will contribute to the modernisation and optimisation of Posten Bring's IT platform – making the group's digital tools more secure, efficient and user-friendly. The scope includes:

- A modern and flexible Digital Workplace solution:
The digital workplace gives employees secure, flexible access to applications, data and services – regardless of device or location. The solution combines device management, virtual desktops, application delivery and security, tailored to a hybrid workday and supporting seamless collaboration across teams and platforms.

- Private Cloud hosted in Norwegian data centres:

Posten Bring will adopt Sopra Steria's scalable cloud platform, supporting both legacy and modern applications. The solution ensures high operational reliability, faster systems, and easier maintenance – while meeting strict requirements for security, privacy, and Norwegian regulations.

- Identity Governance and Administration (IGA):

Posten Bring is modernising its existing IGA solution to simplify the management and control of digital identities and access rights across cloud and on-premises environments. The new solution will provide improved access control, better insight, and help reduce risk and ensure compliance with security requirements.

Delivering at a global level

The agreement reinforces Sopra Steria's position as a leading provider of digital platform services.

Odd Inge Bjørdal, Director of Digital Platform Services at Sopra Steria Scandinavia, said: "This is a strong testament to our ability to serve public services. Our broad service portfolio and specialist expertise were critical factors in securing this contract.

We are proud of the trust Posten Bring has placed in us. It is a forward-leaning Nordic group that has earned international recognition for its digital transformation initiatives. Being selected as one of their strategic partners in an ambitious collaboration is a major vote of confidence. We look forward to working closely with the entire Posten Bring value chain to ensure robust end-to-end solutions"

About Posten Bring

Posten Bring is a leading Nordic postal and logistics group with approximately 12,000 employees and 3,800 delivery points across Norway. The company is wholly owned by the Norwegian state, with the Ministry of Trade, Industry and Fisheries as its owner representative.

Posten Bring operates under two brands:
